

Bret W. Jorgensen
Strategic Advisor

Mr. Jorgensen is currently a Strategic Advisor to several healthcare companies. He was most recently CEO of MDVIP, the nation's largest personalized healthcare company. In December 2009 he led the successful sale of the company to Procter & Gamble. Prior to that, he was CEO of InSight Health Corp., a $300 million diagnostic imaging business with 2,400 employees. After completing a financial restructuring late 2007, he left to pursue other interests. Prior to that he spent four years as the CEO of Directfit, an IT services company that he sold to TEKsystems. Prior to Directfit, Mr. Jorgensen Co-Founded TheraTx a successful, publicly traded diversified healthcare services organization, in 1989. He was a Director and as President of TheraTx Health Services was responsible for five operating divisions with 8,000 employees. Mr. Jorgensen left in 1997, shortly after TheraTx was sold to Vencor for $550 million. TheraTx was recognized as the 2nd fastest growing public company in America by Inc. magazine in 1995. In 1995 Mr. Jorgensen received the "Entrepreneur of the Year" Award. He received his Bachelor of Arts, Cum Laude in Economics from Claremont McKenna College in 1981.

Mr. Jorgensen is currently a director of MDVIP (a wholly owned sub of P&G) and Concerro. He is a Strategic Advisor to Qualcomm Life, Hello Health and Private Health Management. He has served as a Director of several public and private companies, primarily in the healthcare field. Mr. Jorgensen served as a member of Scripps Institution of Oceanography Director's Cabinet and Big Brothers of San Diego Board and Presidents' Council (he was former "Big" for 10 years). He is Chairman Emeritus of the Young Presidents' Organization (YPO) of San Diego and an active member of YPO/WPO and has served in numerous YPO Regional and International roles.

Mr. Jorgensen has two kids and one wife. He is an avid helicopter skier and snowboarder, who also enjoys surfing, diving, running and other outdoor activities. He and his family enjoy adventure travel and volunteering.